ENVIRONMENTAL EXCELLENCE AWARDS

Last night at London's historic Hurlingham Club, organisations from around the UK were gathered together to applaud and award the leaders in environmental excellence. Their successes have proved that when organisations invest in a development strategy which embraces environment impact - every one wins.

The award for the Best 'Carbon Reduction Project' was presented by the sponsor of this category Angus Robertson CEO of powerPerfector to ??????? for their ????? project.

The hard fought project categories were judged by high profile environmentalists including Jonathon Porritt and Joanna Yarrow. Jonathan Porritt winner of last year's 'Green Personality of the Year Award' was again shortlisted this year in a line up that included Barrack Obama, Franny Armstrong and Kevin McCloud, ???was the delighted winner of this year's award.

All the category winners and their projects are available to view on the edie website.

The amazing WOW awards.

Last week 50 children with teachers, volunteers and support staff participated in what proved to be a truly inspirational day. 10 schools presented their ideas before a dragons den style panel of influential environmental judges including Liz

Canon Burrows C.E. Primary School were the overall winners with their 'Why throw away perfectly good pencils'. Along with the wonderful trophy, the winning school will now be powerPerfected which will provide the entire school with savings in costs, kWh and carbon emissions enabling them to fund other wiping out waste initiatives going forward.

'The most fantastic presentations I have seen on the topic - ever. They would certainly give my students a run for their money. Often individuals think that they are unable to make a difference, but just imagine if all the schools in Britain took up the suggestions today and all the homes did the same thing there would be millions and millions of tones of carbon saved in this country - if that was translated around the world it would have a huge impact. Everything that every one does has a significant impact and can make a big difference without changing our lifestyles very much at all - WOW has been absolutely Brilliant!'
